

Hello,

We are writing to you as a faithful customer because the Pond Bar was attracting too much custom and the discretion of the Bakery was being challenged. Plus, one man kept coming to drink Bad Days and he was too chatty. We were too polite to get rid of him, but one morning we quietly pulled up the umbrellas and replanted the terraces with wildflower seed.

So, we are announcing privately to you and other friends that the Pond Bar has moved to a rowboat moored to a log on the island of the Pond Bakery. Only three people can go out at a time with a basket packed with drinks, Sun in the Mouth 27 and dice. An umbrella attached to the stern, optimally blocks the sun by following it like a sunflower. As the boat drifts lazily around the island three people play games of chance on the middle seat of the rowboat. State law requires casinos to float, and it is important to the bar to have our licenses in good order. The winner of an uncommon sequence gets to ask a free major question to the oracle, but must leave the boat just after.

Please visit us again as soon as you have the chance, and if you have any questions, please considering consulting the oracle for an omen or a bean.

Sincerely,
Ghost Office
